Cultural Anthropology and Human Diversity

This FIG is about globalization, world regions, and education. You will study globalization from educational, international studies, and anthropological perspectives. The primary goal is to connect international studies (with a focus on global economic, political, cultural, and social patterns); anthropological understandings of mobility, cultures, and communities; and an understanding of the role of education in society. You will develop:

- understandings of people, communities, and societies from social, cultural, political, economic and global perspectives;
- the ability to understand and locate the role of schooling within local and global economic, political, social, and cultural patterns; and
- knowledge about how schools and classrooms can and do reflect and represent global knowledge, perspectives, and issues.

In the main FIG seminar, Curriculum & Instruction 292: “Globalizing Education,” you will consider the impact of globalization on schooling; the relationship of schooling to increasingly global societies; and how policy, curriculum, and instruction can be responsive to globalization.

International Studies 101: “Introduction to International Studies” — This course familiarizes students with the field of international studies, and provides an interdisciplinary examination of the cultural, political, economic, and social patterns that have defined the modern world.

Anthropology 104: “Cultural Anthropology and Human Diversity” — This introduction to cultural anthropology for non-majors looks at societies around the world and within the United States to understand how societies are organized, including economics, politics, language, religion, ecology, gender, and kinship. ●

Enrolled in a FIG and you change your mind?

FIG classes are designed to be taken together. When you enroll in a FIG, you are signed up for these classes as a whole group, not as separate classes.

Dropping one FIG class means ending your enrollment in all of the classes in the FIG.

So, here's what you should know if you want to drop the FIG:

- You can drop all the classes on your own at enroll.wisc.edu. Any non-FIG class will not be affected.
- After classes begin, if you need to drop a single class within the FIG, please contact Kari Fernholz (see below) to review your situation. If necessary, she will provide the required authorization to drop the class.
- Wednesday, September 11, 2019 is the last day to drop a class without it appearing on your college transcript.
- Friday, September 13, 2019 is the last day to add a class without first getting department permission.
